

The Bedtime Story

“Once upon a time, there was a great gathering. The most powerful planets gathered their greatest warriors, scholars, and explorers, and sat before them a task: Far out in the reaches of space, there was a planet. It was calling out for help. So, this group of brave adventurers embarked on a voyage to save this planet. Among them all, there were three chosen ones. A brilliant scholar, Kira; a wise warrior, Tod; and a crafty explorer, Utron, were selected to be the vanguard. For weeks, this group travelled through space. Their ship struggled; some on the crew wondered if it would even survive the journey, for this was far longer a journey than any had ever travelled before.”

“After weeks of dodging asteroids and fighting back the creatures of space, they found themselves at the planet. These three brave adventurers left the ship; the planet was full of bitter cold, and the sounds of monsters roared in the distance at night. The three found their way to a cave, where they could tell the planet needed help. Inside, they began to set up camp, when suddenly, they were attacked! A group of dragon cultists tried to ambush them, but the warriors drove them back. They finished setting up camp, then laid down to rest. In the morning, they set out to explore the caves. Led by the infallible explorer, the party navigated the labyrinth, dodging countless traps, until they found their way into the dragon’s den.”

“Now, dragons are incredibly powerful creatures; this was one of the most powerful kinds, the dreaded lunar dragon! It had taken people and brainwashed them into serving it, so the group decided they needed to stop it. The wizard, who had spent time that morning preparing to face the cultist’s leader, threw a magic cage around the dragon while the warrior single-handedly fought off the waves of minions to protect his friends. The crafty explorer, in the midst of the chaos, spotted a weak point on the dragon. He lined up a shot... and BAM! He felled the dragon with a single powerful blow.”

“With the dragon defeated, the three wondered if their job was done. Behind the dragon, though, deeper in the cave, the group heard a sound; the planet still needed help. They set off on their journey once more.”

“Inside, they found an ancient factory. There were clockwork creatures there, malfunctioning after years of neglect, and they attacked the brave adventurers. It was a simple task to shut them down, but in the process, the group found that the factory was running! The malfunctioning beasts had broken the factory and forced it to make more of them, and the factory was on the verge of blowing up! This was the threat to the planet—they had found it! The group set forth to shut down the factory. They uncovered a hidden room that took them deep underground, into the control room of the factory. There, they found a horrible monster—a clockwork FACE STEALER! It had stolen the faces of the old workers who had lived there, and now, it was going to steal theirs too!”

“Exhausted from all their fighting, the brave warriors stood up to fight one last time. The battle was hard—much harder than even fighting the dragon! But our heroes could not be stopped; blow after blow, they fought the Face-Stealer, until eventually, they triumphed! Our heroes defeated the monster, shut down the factory, and discovered what it had been originally making—ships! The people who used to live there were brilliant star-sailors; with their notes, the scholar was able to figure out how to improve their ship and make sure they returned home safely.”

“As they left the factory, she noticed a collapsed section of the factory. Under the rubble, there were a few workers who hadn’t survived. However, they had managed to protect something that seemed very precious to them—orbs of pure starlight. Wanting to look after what they had given their life to protect, the scholar took the orbs. Starlight in hand, the party left; they traveled back to their own ship, journeyed back into the stars, and went on to improve ships for everyone, making the sky accessible for anyone who desired freedom, exploration, or just to follow their own path in life.

The end.”
