

Arts Domain (Cleric)

Throughout nearly every culture, various deities have been associated with the arts. Some find connection to their gods through painting—others through weaving. Some chase divinity through culinary perfection, some hear it in the music they play, others feel it in their bones as they dance along. Nearly every aspect of mortal life draws joy through its connections to the arts, and it is a deity of those arts that has chosen you to carry a spark of its power.

Art Domain Spells

Starting at 1st level, you have been granted access to a wider array of spells to reflect the boundless potential of art. Whenever you finish a long rest, you can prepare one additional spell beyond what your prepared spell limit is. This increases to two additional spells at 3rd level, 3 at 5th level, 4 at 7th, and 5 additional spells at 9th level. When you prepare one of these spells, you can choose to select it from the Bard spell list instead. These spells count as Cleric spells for you, even if they are not normally Cleric spells.

Divine Inspiration

At 1st level, your deity has bestowed upon you an appreciation for and knowledge of the arts. You gain proficiency in two tool sets of your choice, and whenever you make a Charisma check or an ability check with tools you are proficient with, you can choose to use your Wisdom modifier for the check.

Additionally, you can use a tool set you are proficient with as a spellcasting focus for your Cleric spells.

Distracting Performance

Also at 1st level, you can use your magic to draw the attention of friend and foe alike. As a bonus action, you can invoke a form of art to enrapture those around; all creatures within 30 feet of you are affected by this. Make a Performance check; allied creatures under an effect that requires an Intelligence, Wisdom, or Charisma saving throw to break free can immediately attempt to do so, using the results of your check for their saving throw. Creatures who you do not consider an ally must instead make a Wisdom saving throw or become distracted until the start of your next turn; if the result of your Performance check is higher than your Cleric save DC, you can instead use your check to determine the DC instead. A distracted creature has disadvantage on all saving throws and Perception checks; if they take damage, they can attempt to repeat the saving throw again, ending their distraction on a success. You can use this feature a number of times equal to your Wisdom modifier (minimum 1), and you regain all expended uses on a long rest.

Channel Divinity: Artistic Synergy

At level 2, you have learned that the true depth of art is achieved through a combination of techniques—chords strengthen an individual note, shadows highlight a brighter color, music makes a dance more immersive. Through the grace of your deity, you can apply this concept to your magic. Whenever you cast a Cleric spell that requires concentration, if you are already concentrating on a spell, you can expend a use of your Channel Divinity to concentrate on both spells at once instead of losing concentration on the first spell. Whenever you make a concentration check on a spell, the results of that check apply to both spells, rather than making a separate check for each one; however, due to the difficulty of concentrating on two spells, you must make these concentration checks at disadvantage.

Creative Vision

Starting at level 6, you have gained the ability to magically alter your more-artistic spells to meet your expectations for them. When you cast a Conjuration, Illusion or Transmutation spell, you can expend an additional spell slot of at least 1st level to empower the spell. When you do so, choose one of the following effects: 1. The spell is cast as though it were one level higher, 2. Creatures who make a saving throw for the spell must do so at disadvantage, or 3. Creatures who receive the effects of the spell have their current and maximum hit points increased by half your Cleric level, rounded up, until they complete a long rest. You can empower a spell in this way a number of times equal to your Wisdom modifier (minimum 1), and you regain all expended uses on a long rest.

Potent Spellcasting

If you are playing with the 2024 rules, this feature is replaced by the level 7 class feature, Blessed Strikes.

Starting at level 8, you can add your Wisdom modifier to the damage of any of your Cleric cantrips.

Endless Creativity

Beginning at level 17, you have been granted the ability to realize whatever your artistic vision can entail. You learn the spells Fabricate and Creation; these spells are always prepared, do not count against your prepared spell limit, and they count as Cleric spells for you. As a Bonus Action, you can enter an artistic trance. For one minute, the casting times for Fabricate and Creation each decrease to an Action, and the materials created by Creation do not expire and can be properly used as spell components, although the value of materials created in this way are only half their standard value. Once you have used this feature, you cannot do so again until you complete 1d4 long rests.
