

Spiritbound Patron (Warlock)

For most Warlocks, their patron is a singular entity of great power. Through their pact with this being, they gain access to knowledge and abilities considered aberrant, strange, and often fear-inducing. You are not like other Warlocks. Your patron is a group of beings—oftentimes very mortal and weak themselves—whose collective willpower has come together, bound in spirit, to empower you. Whether through an arcane ritual or some other phenomenon, you have been chosen to wield your newfound magic in the service of others.

Expanded Spell List

The power of your pact has unlocked the following spells; whenever you reach a level in the table, you may add the listed spells to your class spell list. These spells count as Warlock spells for you, even if they are not normally Warlock spells. If you are playing with the 2024 version of Warlock, these spells are automatically prepared and do not count against your number of known and prepared spells.

Level	Spells
1	Bless, Find Familiar*
3	Aid, Warding Bond
5	Beacon of Hope, Life Transference
7	Aura of Purity, Death Ward
9	Rary's Telepathic Bond, Seeming

*If you gain the Pact of the Chain feature, the base casting time for Find Familiar decreases to 1 Action.

If Life Transference (from Xanathar's Guide to Everything) is not available at your table, you can replace this with Sending.

Soul Bond

Your magic is based in the same reservoir of power that Monks can tap into. You have gained the ability to use your own willpower to lash together the individual strands of life energy that others give off; although you cannot tap into this power in the same way as a Monk, you can serve as a battery, collecting and storing this energy to be used in a myriad of other ways.

Starting at level 1, you can create a mystical bond between yourself and others. As a bonus action, you can bind your soul to a number of other willing creatures that you can see, up to your Charisma modifier (minimum 1). This bond lasts until you use a bonus action to change your bonded creatures or until either you or that creature dies. While you are not incapacitated and are bonded to a creature, you can make use of your bond in the following ways.

Ki Battery. You can use a bonus action on each of your turns to charge up ki from your bonded allies, including yourself. For each bonded creature within 90 feet, you can roll a d6. If a creature has the Extra Attack feature or something similar, you may add an additional d6 for each extra attack they can make, up to their maximum number of attacks. You may also draw upon any magical energy that your bonded creatures have used; if one of your bonded allies has cast a leveled spell since the end of your last turn, you may add an additional d6 for each level of the spell they cast. You gain a number of ki stacks equal to the total rolled. (Note: This is not the same form of ki as Monks use and does not stack with those ki points.) You can have a maximum number of ki stacks equal to 10 x your Warlock level. You can use a bonus action to store ki in this way a number of times equal to your Charisma modifier, regaining all expended uses on a short or long rest. Whenever you complete a short or long rest, all your stored stacks are lost.

Inspiring Bond. When you or a creature you are bonded to fails a saving throw or ability check, you can use a reaction to allow them to reroll it and take the higher of the two results. You can grant them a bonus to this roll by expending any number of ki stacks; this bonus is equal to one point for every 4 stacks expended (or stacks expended ÷ 4, rounded down). You can use this reaction a number of times equal to your Charisma modifier, regaining all expended uses on a long rest and regaining a single use on a short rest.

Bonded Shield. When you or a creature you are bonded to takes damage, you can use a reaction to grant them temporary hit points prior to taking damage. The number of temporary hit points equals half your Warlock level, rounded up; you can increase this amount by expending any number of ki stacks, adding 1 temporary hit point for every 5 stacks consumed. These temporary hit points last until the end of their next turn. You can use this reaction a number of times equal to your Charisma modifier, regaining all expended uses on a long rest and regaining a single use on a short rest.

Revitalizing Ki. You can regain an expended Pact Slot, no action required, by expending a number of ki stacks equal to 10 x the level of the slot.

Spirit Reserves

Starting at level 6, you can supplement your ki charges by tapping into your own life energy. Whenever you use a feature that could expend ki, you can boost the power of that feature. You can increase the number of stacks expended, even above your maximum reserves, by expending Hit Dice. For each die you expend, you can roll it, adding the number rolled to the total number of expended ki stacks; you also take necrotic damage equal to the rolled amount(s), which cannot be reduced in any way.

Also beginning at level 6, whenever you finish a short rest or long rest, you can roll a number of d4's equal to your level and immediately gain that many ki stacks.

Empowered Bonds

Starting at 10th level, you can fortify your allies with your bonds. When you use a bonus action to change your bonded creatures, or as a bonus action while bonded with others, you can grant temporary hit points to all your bonded creatures (including yourself). The number of temporary hit points is equal to your Charisma modifier; you can increase this number by expending ki stacks, adding 1d6 to the total for every 10 stacks expended. These temporary hit points last until the end of the creature's next long rest.

Additionally at 10th level, whenever you use Bonded Shield or Inspiring Bond, you can grant the benefit to multiple bonded creatures by expending an additional 10 ki stacks for each creature.

Lastly, while you are bonded to a creature, you can cast spells with a range of Touch on the creature, even if they are not within your reach.

Explosive Spirit

Beginning at level 14, you can use an Action to channel the energy of your bonds into an offensive blast. A point of your choice that you can see within 90 feet explodes in magical power. Creatures of your choice within 30 feet of the point must make a Dexterity saving throw. On a fail, they take Force damage based on how many stacks of ki you expended; on a success, they take half damage. The damage is equal to 4d10 plus 1d10 for every 10 stacks expended. You cannot use this feature again until you finish a short or long rest, unless you expend a Pact Slot to do so again.

Also starting at 14th level, you can roll d6's instead of d4's to determine how many ki stacks you gain when you finish a short or long rest.
